The Ulvenson family later known as House Ulvenson was originally a peasant house that traces back to the village of Hoarton in the Kingdom of Aedirn.

The family possessed a powerful Source gene though only a few members have actually manifested it, with a majority being just carriers of the gene.

The Ulvenson family would be raised up in the 12th century under Eoltan who took on the surname from his maternal heritage at his great grand uncle's request. The family home would become Thornwood Manor which would aid and receive aid from their relative Adalwulf of Aedirn.

Four years after taking over Eoltan would be given the title of Baron and a barony over the area. This would make the Ulvenson family, a noble family.

They would become business partners with the School of the Fox despite the distance and would become a focal point for the Northern Realms branches of the Witchers.

History

Peasantry days

Originally the bloodline of the Ulvenson name can be traced back to an Aedirnian peasant couple: Ralluald, a retired soldier turned peasant and his wife Ugga who was also a peasant in the village of Hoarton.

1114 AR

The couple (Ralluald and Ugga) are married in their home village of Hoarton after a standard peasant engagement period.

1115 AR

The eldest Ulvenson child, a daughter named Taeka was born.

1116 AR

The second Ulvenson child, another daughter named Dheiphi was born.

1117 AR

The third Ulvenson child, a son named Daskel was born.

1121 AR

The fourth and fifth Ulvenson children, the fraternal twins: the daughter Eishe and the son Adalwulf were born.

1122 AR

The sixth Ulvenson child, a daugther Oki was born.

1124 AR

The final Ulvenson child, a daughter named Arrah was born.

1125 AR

Ralluald contracts a curse from a mage. This curse manifested itself as a major psychosis that turned Ralluald violent, irrational, and depressive. In desperation, Ralluald would privately promise his eldest son Daskel to a Witcher of the School of the Wolf in exchange for a cure from the curse, the Witcher instead later chose the younger Adalwulf saying he felt a tug of destiny from the boy. So desperate was Ralluald that he agreed without even telling his wife or the rest of his family.

1131 AR

Four years after his contract, the Witcher came to take Adalwulf to Kaer Morhen, Ugga, of course, was against this, Rallualdhaving not told her anything until the Witcher came for their son, and Eishe, in particular, was very distraught at her brother being taken away but Adalwulf took the witcher's hand and was calmly led away to his new life. Later that night Eishe manifested her powers for the first time telekinetically blasting a boulder in a cave where she had gone to vent her frustration.

On the day of his brother's departure, Daskel would join a group of local musicians and learn to be a bard from them leaving his position of the future head of the household behind.

Rallualdh slacks off on his curse treatment, thinking his curse to be treated, and ends up dying. Because of his giving his son Adalwulf to a witcher for treatment and his failure to keep up with his treatment, his family has little sympathy for him. He has a simple funeral and is promptly forgotten by most of his relatives.

1135 AR

Eldest daughter Taeka would elope with a man who would turn out to be a philandering man who slept around and refused to stop when she found out. She would never return to the old Ulvenson household though.

April 23, of the Imbolc Savaed, 1136 AR

While playing in a field with her younger sister Arrah, a deep reconnaissance Nilfgaardian scouting party happens upon Eishe, not wanting any witnesses to their presence the scouts attempt to kill the girls with arrows, Arrah manifests her powers saving her sister, seeing such a powerful display from the young girl, the scouts change their mind to kidnap Arrah. Eishe fearing losing another family member manifests her powers again paralyzing all the soldiers long enough for Arrah to get back to the village and for Ugga to rally the men. Eishe loses her grip on one of the soldiers and he knocks her out, the scouts decide to take Eishe instead and retreat back south. Eishe is forcibly enrolled at the Imperial Magic Academy or as it is called 'Gweison Haul', to learn to use her magic for the good of the Empire.

Arrah who was left behind tried to explain what happened, but then word got out about Arrah's magical affinity, and a representative of Aretuza, came to collect Arrah for a proper magical education.

1151 AR

Taeka is cursed by a Coram Agh Tera cultist for refusing her charity so the cultist cursed her so that food she ate turned to ash in her mouth, but she could not starve.

1152 AR

Taeka has some good luck as she is freed from her curse by the well-known bear school witcher Razan of Cintra, (who ironically was a friend of her brother though neither the witcher nor her were aware of this) within a year of receiving it.

1159 AR

Daskel ended up trapped together with a male craftsman. The two end up becoming friends. They ended up setting up a music shop The Iron Lute in Redania, Daskel and his descendants use this shop as their main shop for musical instruments. Daskel would buy his beloved heirloom lute from this shop.

1178-1179

Daskel happily settled down with an Aedirnian woman, even marries her a year later.

1187

A son is born to Daskel, he names him Cenhu.

1191 AR

Taeka has her first child, a son named Cornall.

1197 AR

After investigating his lover's suspicious behavior Daskel discovers his lover (who is much younger than him) is working as a whore, and in his depression, he is ambushed by a stray Flying Drake which swooped down on him in the city.

1201 AR

Taeka has a set of fraternal twins, a daugther named Tipha and, a son named Stecast.

1205 AR

Taeka dies at the age of 90 as a casualty of a small unnamed war.

1216 AR

By her 15th birthday Tipha experienced prophetic visions, seizures and spasms. Her brother, Stecast unaware of her family's connection to magic, tried his best to shelter his sister but recorded the words she spoke while in her trances, sometimes it was nothing but there were occasions where something otherworldly spoke words of prophecy through Tipha.

1219 AR

Tipha (18) gets married to her childhood sweetheart, a kind peasant man who knew about Tipha's condition and cared for her anyway. Tipha's brother Cornall hired a priestess to officiate the wedding, Cornall and the priestess end up becoming friends.

1231 AR

Tipha dies due to a mysterious condition, Cornall contacts a mage to get himself and Stecast tested for something but Cornall or the mage doesn't tell him for what.

Later that year Stecast's daugther, Farah is born.

1251 AR

Farah has her first child, a daughter named Anela.

1253 AR

Farah has her second child, a son named Fren.

1259 AR

Farah has her third child, a daughter named Invina.

1262 AR

Farah has her fourth child, a son named Worrins.

1270 AR

The witcher Adalwulf of Aedirn is deeded Thornwood Manor, a location that would become the family compound for new generations of the Ulvenson bloodline.

1272 AR

Farah has her fifth child, a daughter named Elvine.

1274 AR

Farah has her sixth child, a daughter named Aelvina.

Family Motto

Though originally a poor, peasant family back in its roots of the 11th century, three members of the family would rise above the others: two sorceresses and a witcher. The witcher would be knighted and would pass his lands and title to his great grand nephew Eoltan under the promise of reuniting and strengthening the family line. It is at this time that Adalwulf would teach a Toissaintoi phrase 'Noblesse Oblige' which would become the driving force to building the land from a knight land to a barony.
